Can we have some kind of notification about the update? I haven't received any notification about the update and I can't seem to find it in the topic either. A: So it seems this issue was resolved by the community. The next update of webrec.cab will come with various fixes (related to the installer being full of bugs). For now, this is the current version that I'm using. The newest version (build 8.2.0.3058) has the following updates (from the post by rxx): Release Date: April 21, 2019 Update: Fixed issues related to the installer being full of bugs However, they are also testing out a new bugfix version. I would suggest you to wait for the release of that. If you have already installed this update, then you may need to uninstall it (run the Uninstaller), then download the latest version. See also: WebRec - WebRec v8.2.0.3058 Release Notes I installed the latest version (build 8.2.0.3058) and it works. I'm posting this here so if others are using this, they don't go around asking about the latest version, and get confused. The heart in chronic renal failure. The cardiorenal syndrome is a common complication of chronic renal failure. The heart responds in several ways to this damage to the kidneys, and its ultimate effects are dependent on the degree and duration of the renal damage. Hemodynamic effects are well known, although they occur only when the glomerular filtration rate falls below 50 mL/min. The prevalence of heart failure in dialysis patients is high, and cardiovascular death is an important cause of morbidity and mortality. Cardiomyopathy is also a common manifestation of chronic renal failure, but is not an exclusive feature of the cardiorenal syndrome. Drugs that affect the cardiac and neurohumoral responses to renal failure also have important effects on cardiac disease. Drugs that improve glomerular function have an important role in protecting the heart, and these include the angiotensin-converting enzyme inhibitors, aldosterone receptor antagonists and paricalcitol. In patients with heart failure, heart transplantation offers the only definitive treatment for this disorder.
